

UNTOLD STORIES

Final Conference

The final conference of the Untold Stories project will be held in Fürstfeldbruck, Germany on 26 September 2009.

Europe's i2010 initiative emphasises the enhanced use of ICTs for lifelong learning and social inclusion, making Europe's rich literary and audiovisual heritage available to as many people as possible by combining individual creativity with the opportunities offered by new technologies.

Libraries, museums and other cultural organisations can play a vital role in delivering new learning agendas using techniques such as Digital Storytelling, building on their strong roots in local communities, by developing partnerships with local organisations and seeing themselves as part of the lifelong learning and social inclusion landscapes.

Untold Stories has set out to provide informal learning opportunities for migrant communities across Europe by carrying out, testing and evaluating innovative Digital Storytelling methodologies, helping to develop on a practical basis the learning dimension of cultural organisations. A major practical dimension of this work is to establish and implement a process for the creation of 'libraries' of Digital Stories. The initial results can be seen at: <http://www.untoldstories.eu/>

Migrant communities based in the Czech Republic, Denmark, Germany and Greece have been enabled to record and share their personal experiences in a digital environment, using the potential of Web 2.0 technologies.

The conference will demonstrate and discuss the outcomes of Untold Stories and look forward to ways in which its scope and that of other key Digital Storytelling initiatives can be taken forward.

Cultural sector representatives from all over Europe are invited to share their experiences, good practices and exchange their views on ways in which they can contribute to learning, creativity, mutual understanding and social development through Digital Storytelling.

The Conference is free but places are limited. Registration is essential.
